

STRATEGIES FOR SCALING ACTIVE LEARNING CLASSROOMS ACROSS CAMPUS

May 31, 2017 :: 1:00 - 2:00 p.m. EDT

Learn strategies for bringing active learning opportunities to your entire campus.

OVERVIEW

Learn how you can pursue a scalable model for creating active learning spaces across campus. While many institutions focus their efforts on creating just a few showcase spaces, they miss a huge opportunity to transform classrooms all over campus and change the way students learn. During this training, you will examine not only how to improve the physical space, but also how to gain buy-in from faculty for a pedagogy shift that takes advantage of the spaces you create. You will leave with strategies that will save you time and money to create spaces that extend and improve student learning.

Throughout the presentation, you will see active learning spaces at the University of Florida to help understand the concepts discussed.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Professionals working in faculty development, libraries, academic technology, and academic leadership will benefit the most from this webcast. Attending with your campus and facilities planners will be especially helpful because the topics discussed within this training involve both physical space and pedagogy.

AGENDA

Wednesday, May 31, 2017 :: 1:00 - 2:00 p.m. EDT

We will showcase University of Florida spaces throughout the webcast and discuss specific ways to use each of the following strategies:

1. Tracking and staying engaged with stakeholders
2. Using the Learning Space Rating System (LSRS) to incorporate nationally developed benchmarks and ratings into your solutions
3. Researching specific learning space projects on FLEXspace.org
4. Getting senior administrators and other colleagues bought in to using campus dollars
