Give Academic Leaders the Resources and Support They Need

80% of a university's critical decisions are made at the department level, yet most faculty leaders were not trained and receive little support for the critical roles they now assume.

We Can Help

Subscribe to the most comprehensive library of academic leadership resources available today. The library is packed with hundreds of resources (articles and whitepapers, research reports, webinars, videos, job aids, etc.) and has been designed to:

- Meet leaders where they are
  Every leader has different needs; their areas of strength and experience in the role vary. Rather than relying on "one-size-fits-all," our library offers a range of topics and a range of approaches.

- Provide "just in time" support
  Access resources when you need them: Have to give someone tough feedback? Have to address a conflict where the stakes are high? Have a high profile meeting that needs to go well? These resources are available anywhere and at any time to ensure you have the information when you need it most.

- Serve diverse learners
  Our resources span articles, whitepapers, research reports, videos, job aids and webinars. Go in-depth for an hour on a topic, watch a 20-minute video, or download a simple guide. The content is designed to be flexible to meet a diverse range of learning styles.

- Cater specifically to higher ed
  Leading in a higher-ed context, especially on the academic side, is different than leading anywhere else. Our resources have been designed by higher-ed leaders for higher-ed leaders, and our experts are carefully vetted from across the country.

- Focus on practical strategies and tangible skills
  Academic leaders are busy; you need information you can use right away. That's why all of our resources—whether it's a 3-page article or a 60-minute webinar—are packed full of practical, actionable advice based on real examples and scenarios to help you build your leadership skillset.
